Although cheerfulness of disposition is very much a matter of in-born temperament, it is also capable of being trained and cultivated like any other habit. We may make the best of life or we may make the worst of it and it depends very much on ourselves whether we extract joy or misery from it. There are always two sides of life on which we can look, according as we choose—the bright side or the gloomy. We can bring the power of the will to bear in making the choice, and thus cultivate the habit of being happy or the reverse. We can encourage the disposition of looking at the brightest side of things instead of the darkest. And while we see the cloud, let us not shut our eyes to the silver lining.

SEEING BENTLEY OFF

An Interruption That Was Not Resented.

By ETHEL SEVERO.

Amy Sheldon, leaning idly over the steamer's rail, watched the crowd on the pier and wished just for a moment that there had been an opportunity to get word to some of the people she could trust.

This was all so different from her last sailing, and it brought more sharply to her memory the scene of two days before when she had given Dick Nesbitt his ring and had declared that she hated the very sight of his face.

She had last sailed in June, and the pier had been crowded, but until the very last she had seen Dick's smiling face framed in an indistinct blur of other faces. Now she would look in vain, if indeed she looked at all.

She had about decided to go to her stateroom until the boat should swing into the stream.

She half turned to suggest to her aunt that course of action when she caught sight of Dick making his way through the crowd about the gangway, and presently he came on board with a heavy suit case that seemed to argue his determination to take passage on the Aurania.

Any half turned back to the rail; then she turned again and made her way to the lower deck, where she knew that the purser's office was located.

Passing rapidly through the gangway, she saw that it really was Dick, though he was in earnest conversation with a man in blue and brass, and he did not see her.

He had his pocketbook in his hand, and with flashing eyes Amy made her way back to the upper deck, where her aunt still sat in the winter sunshine enjoying the bustle that preceded the departure.

One of the most admirable things about Aunt Molly was her willingness to do what her impetuous little niece wished to do, but even the usually placid Aunt Molly demurred when Amy stormed up and demanded that they leave the ship at once.

"But I've said goodbye to the Brookes, and Mrs. Brooke is going to send all our mail in care of the London agent," protested the little old lady. "We can't go back home after telling the Brookes that we were to be gone until fall. She will tell all her friends and—"

"And that's just the trouble," interrupted Amy, with a stamp of her little foot. "Mrs. Brooke has been talking—already. She must have gone to the telephone the moment I left last night and told everybody she ever knew."

"But what will Dick think if he meets them and then finds out?" retorted Aunt Molly, determined not to give up a spring in the south of France without exhausting every argument.

"That's just the trouble," explained Amy. "That horrid Mrs. Brooke must have called him up last night after promising that she would not tell a soul. He's on board, and I can tell in the purser's office, buying his ticket."

"I thought that they bought them at the dock," objected Aunt Molly, but Amy shook her head.

"You can buy tickets on board at the last moment. I suppose that Dick—mea Mr. Nesbitt—had to wait until he could settle about his practice being looked after—so that there is so much to the practice," she added spitefully. "I don't believe that he's been in court this month."

"Is he altogether to blame for that?" asked Aunt Molly, frowning for time to give to the marshal arguments.

"And suppose that I did let him know, I am almost sure," retorted Amy. "I've been telling him for the last month that I was tired of seeing him about and that our engagement was all a mistake."

"Then I don't think that he is following you," advanced Aunt Molly. "Dick is not the sort of man to follow when he is not wanted, and Amy, on board it is because he has to reach Europe by the first steamer, and he won't bother as in the least."

"Because I shall give him a chance," explained Amy promptly. "I am going down to the stateroom to have the steward take our suitcase back to the dock. It is lucky that we arranged to have our other baggage follow."

"But what will people say?" demanded Aunt Molly as she rose and prepared to follow her energetic niece. It was plainly to be seen that the trip was off or at least postponed, and Amy Molly knew the signs well enough to realize when resistance was useless.

Any diast of liberal tipping managed to collect her things on the dock just as the final warning sounded. For the moment it was useless to try to leave the dock.

The port captain stood beside the remaining gangway ready to superintend the lowering of the last connection between ship and shore, and a line was stretched to keep back those who were not to the end of the pier to wave a last farewell.

The sides of the ship were lined with eager faces, some smiling, some bedewed with tears. Aunt Molly stood court over their belongings and looked wistfully at the fortunate ones on the docks.

Just as the signal was given to hoist Dick Nesbitt appeared at the head of the gangplank and dashed down, his feet not touching the dock before the upper end of the plank was hoisted clear of the ship's side.

He sprang lightly aside to escape the swaying edge of the chute and in doing so he almost bumped into Aunt Molly, who was making a brave endeavor not to look disappointed.

The black bulk moved slowly past the open section of the shed, but Aunt Molly did not see it now. She was busy just then with Dick's smiling face.

Nesbitt, after a single glance at the frowning girl, devoted his conversation to Aunt Molly, with whom he was carrying these things to the ship.

"Did you get afraid of seasickness at the last moment?" he demanded playfully. "I didn't even know that you were making of going abroad or I should have sent some doctors."

Aunt Molly glanced triumphantly at Amy, but that crimson-cheeked young woman gave no sign that she had overheard the disclaimer.

"I came precious close to taking the trip myself," continued Dick. "You know what a pest Fred Nesbitt did say in when there is a wedding. He always wants to decorate the trunk and do all those things that tease the bride's hair."

"When it came to getting married himself he was scared stiff, for he knew of a dozen couples who had it in for him. He married twice very quietly and last night and came aboard this morning before daylight. Some reporter asked him how he felt about it, and we found that Fred was locked in his stateroom."

"Trimmins, the purser of this ship, is a jolly sort of chap. I've cruised with him three times, and I know him very well. The boys got me to bustle down here with a lot of junk in a suit case. I gave Trimmins some money to tip Fred's cabin and saloon stewards, and Fred's going to get a daily bath in the privies. I was so busy explaining that Trimmins had fairly to fire me down the gangplank."

"And you were not sailing yourself?" asked Aunt Molly.

"I only wish to be told—to see the fun," declared Dick, with twinkling eyes. "If it had been that I could have a big case last night I think I should have done so. I let Fred's sorry be this time tomorrow that he ever heard of white ribbons and old shoes as decoration for honeymoon trunks and wedding cars."

Amy was watching the steamer swinging into midstream with the aid of two bustling little tugs, but from the corner of her eye Aunt Molly saw that the girl heard.

"And speaking of cars," ran on Dick, "shall I get you one?"

Without waiting for an answer he took up on the dock to return one of the few waiting autos, then hurried back to escort Aunt Molly and the trunks.

It was not until he had helped Aunt Molly into the car and had turned to show a similar courtesy to Amy that she spoke.

"I thought that Mrs. Brooke told you you were following me," she said hurriedly. "I am sorry that I was so silly, and yet I am glad, because I know now that it was just because I was tired and silly that I broke the engagement. Will you forgive me tonight, Dick—and bring back the ring?"

"Will it?" he echoed jubilantly. "I should say that I would. And, do you know, I am almost sorry that I put up that job on Fred."

"Don't be afraid," reassured Amy smilingly. "That case will be over and we'll be on our own honeymoon, and he gets back to play tricks on us. If you had not played the trick I should have asked, and you—"

"Wouldn't be the happiest man in town," completed Dick. "I guess Fred was of some use, after all."

The late King Edward used to think much of Juste Alphonse Menager, the royal chef, whose death took place a few days ago. Once His Majesty took a particular fancy to one of Menager's dishes. "Ah," he said, "this is the best I have ever eaten." Then he corrected himself. "No, Menager is always at his best; this is just one of his inspirations."

Menager was cook to Baron Alphonse de Rothschild before 1895, when he entered the kitchen of Marlborough House. After King Edward's accession he earned an ambassadorial salary with free lodgings near Big Ben in the Palace thrown in. Menager was a great chef, a cook of cooks, and his reign was appreciated by all the royalties of Europe, who presented him with diamond scarf pins galore.

MATTING THE MISSISSIPPI.

Memphis Carpeting the River Bed to Save the Channel.

The bottom of the Mississippi river, or, rather, portions of it near Memphis, Tenn., are being supplied with a carpet in the shape of pliable mats woven of willow twigs, which are being constructed in sections on the surface of the river and then sunk into place. The river for several years has been cutting a new channel that threatens to leave Memphis high and dry a mile away. The turbulent river already has to its credit, or discredit, a score of towns destroyed in this manner, with consequences serious enough. In the case of Memphis, however, these consequences would be disastrous almost beyond description. Her costly harbor facilities would be utterly ruined and the city left with a huge mudbank between its life line and the stream.

The threatened danger was first noted by government engineers about a year ago, and preparations immediately started to avert it. When the insatiable river has for several years been eating railroads, houses and farms in the vicinity of Memphis, sucking them a mile long and six feet wide. As fast as a section is completed it is weighted with rocks to sink it into place and then planned the bottom with a mile long and 300 feet wide. SHOWING CONFIDENCE.

It Has a Strong Influence in Making Business and Good Times.

From the point of view of optimism are a trifle broader, so instead of burning for optimism I have a few instances of the influence that comes from him, which are being toward bad fortune, and contrast the bad effect of mourning because business is not better.

"How's trade?" asked a stationer. "Trade?" he exclaimed. "Trade? There isn't any. Things are rotten." Now, if I had had any intention of buying anything from him, which I had not, that depressing stationer would have gone a long way to keep me from buying.

"How's things?" I asked the boss of a men's furnishing store a few hours later. "Little quiet, just now," he smiled; "but I can't complain. We have run ahead of last year and prospects are good." I felt like buying a new hat because the cheerfulness of his reply made me feel that money was coming to me, and I am so hungry, I am.

"How's trade?" I asked a tobacconist. "Good," he replied emphatically. "Little slow today, but trade is mighty good. It's a very good right along," and I bought a cigar.

Confidence is the influence that makes good times because it quickens trade. But if all business men were to crumb about bad business, would that influence make us all very careful about doing anything? We would all be so afraid to risk and to face the world hopefully and go to work. The croaker is a trade killer—inland stationer.

But if all business men were to crumb about bad business, would that influence make us all very careful about doing anything? We would all be so afraid to risk and to face the world hopefully and go to work. The croaker is a trade killer—inland stationer.

"How's trade?" I asked a tobacconist. "Good," he replied emphatically. "Little slow today, but trade is mighty good. It's a very good right along," and I bought a cigar.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

As a means of obtaining relief when suffering from the complaint is to extract the juice of eight lemons and mix it carefully with one ounce of honey and a few drops of cod liver oil. Take two tablespoonfuls of the mixture when the cough comes on. Physical exercises for ten or fifteen minutes, either night or morning, is advisable, and sufferers should pay careful attention to diet, avoiding all indigestible foods.

Family Boat of the Eskimo

The "family boat" of the Eskimo is used by the men in whale and walrus hunting and by the whole family during their annual summer trips, which they make to gather the winter store of fish and berries. Then it presents a spectacle not soon forgotten. Crowded to the gunwales with mixed assortment of men, women, children and dogs, together with piles of provisions and hides and all the impediments of carrying a winter store along. A sail of white and colored drilling, sewn in alternate strips, or even of patched skins, assails the laboring vessel through the water. Some of the occupants paddle when they feel like it, others lean the shore or watch the water rippling from the stern. If progress is too slow even for the Eskimo the dogs are put ashore, a stout line of walrus hide is attached to the bow, and they tow the boat along. Such parties go away all summer, or, rather, during the three months' interval which is not winter—a brief, beautiful season of unending delight.—World Magazine.

Atop of Mount McKinley
Arendson Stuehl in his account of his climb to the summit of Mount McKinley, "The Ascent of Denali," gives this description of his impressions upon reaching it: "Immediately before us, in the direction in which we had been going, lay—nothing but a shore gulf many thousands of feet deep and one abrupt bank instinctively from the steeply rising mountain. One of the great glances at the awful profundity. Across the gulf, about 3,000 feet beneath us and fifteen or twenty miles away, sprang most splendidly into view, the great mass of Denali's Wife, or Mount Foraker. In some white mist, a man's face, filling majestically all the middle distance. And never was nobler sight displayed than that from the great isolated mountain, spread out completely, with all its spurs and ridges, its cliffs and its gorges, lofty and mighty, and yet far beneath us. Beyond stretched, blue and vague to the southwest, the wide valley to the southwest, the wide valley of the Kuskokwim, with an end to all mountains. It was, however, to the south and the east that the most marvelous prospect opened before us.

No Rest With Fatigue—Athletes usually attack at night, the time when rest is needed most. Hence the loss of strength, the nervous debility, the loss of flesh and other evils which must be expected unless relief is secured. Fortunately relief is possible. Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Astringent Remedy has proved its merit through years of service. A trial will surely convince you.

The Salt Sea Legend

There is a legend in the Norse sagas which explains why the sea is salt. The "beautiful Ford," whose mythical reign was a golden age indeed, possessed a lion, or, at least, a dog, which ground out gold and peace, but which would grind out stores of anything desired by its owner. Two giant maidens, ruled over by Ford, were the grinders. In an evil day a sea rover came upon the scene, seized the lion and carried the queen off and the two giant maidens who worked it. When the sea rover was ordered the maidens to grind salt. At midnight they asked if they had not come to being awakened from his sleep, commanded them to grind until morning. Now, the giant maidens naturally enough worked very quickly so as they went on grinding the load of salt grew so heavy that it sank the ship, and now the sea will continue salt forever.

The Public Too Often Fails

Unscrupulous dealers, actuated by large profits, often recommend corn cures "as good as Putnam's." There is only one genuine Corn Extractor and that is Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor, which in twenty-four hours cures warts, corns, callouses and bunions. Putnam's is a miracle of efficiency and promptness. Try it six a little.

Gentleman

Gentleman is from the French "gentilhomme" and means one who belongs to the gens or stock. In old Roman law gentlemen, or gentlemen, were those only who had a family name, were born of free parents, had no slaves in their ancestral line and never been degraded to a lower rank.

Ancient Armor

In 1518 a battle was fought near Milan, in Italy, and so perfect was the armor of both armies that, although the conflict raged from 3 a.m. to 4 p.m., no one on either side was either killed or wounded, though one man broke his collar bone by falling off his horse.

A motorist with malapropian propensities was pointing out the different parts of his car, and presently came to a foot lever which he called the "exhilarator."
"That must be what you press when you go joy-riding," wittily remarked one of the bystanders.

"She is having a perfectly lovely time."

Shakespeare's Birth

The exact date of Shakespeare's birth is not known, and the accepted date of April 23 is based on circumstantial evidence. There is record evidence that he was baptized on April 26, 1584, but no record evidence of the date of his birth. He died April 23, 1616, and the inscription upon his monument is evidence that he had already begun his fifty-third year, but does not give any birth date. From these data and other such information as they could obtain, antiquaries in the eighteenth century, 100 years before his death, fixed the date of his birth as April 23, 1584, three years before his baptism. Though not proved beyond doubt that date is universally accepted.—Philadelphia Press.

Miller's Worm Powders are par excellence the medicine for children who are found suffering from the ravages of worms. They immediately alter the stomachic conditions under which the worms subsist and drive them from the system, and, at the same time, they are tonic in their effect upon the digestive organs, restoring them to healthful operation and ensuring immunity from further disorders from such a cause.

An Easterer who had bought a farm in California had heard of his neighbor's talent for raising large potatoes, so he sent him a hand over to get a hundred pounds.

"You go back home," answered the neighbor, and farmed to the messenger, "and tell your wife that I won't eat a potato for anyone."

Husband—"Precisely!—And then have one more bill to keep me awake?"—Topeka Journal.

Cergan Endorses Cure Of Nervous Prostration

Four Doctors Had Failed—Hope Given Up

Mrs. E. T. Ford, 55 McGee Street, Toronto, Ont., states:—"Some time ago I was ill from nervous prostration and for many weeks was in a very serious condition. I was treated by four different doctors without receiving any benefit from their treatment. I had quite given up hope when one day my husband saw Dr. Chase's advertisement, and it seemed so to suit my case that I bought a box of Nerve Food. I improved so rapidly that I continued using the Nerve Food, and I am thankful to say, it worked a complete cure. Since that time we have never been without it in the house, and I gladly recommend it to all my neighbors."

Her Pastor's Endorsement

Rev. G. M. Holmes, Pastor of Eastern Ave. Baptist Church, Toronto, writes:—"I have known Mrs. Ford as a member of my church for over two years, and know that any statement she would make would be correct."

System Run Down—Awfully Nervous

Mrs. John Walfield, La Have Islands, Lunenburg Co., N.S., writes:—"Two years ago my system became greatly run down, and I was awfully nervous. It was very difficult for me to do my housework, and I felt very miserable, I doctored but did not receive any benefit until I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This medicine proved of wonderful benefit to me, building up the system and restoring health and strength. I always feel now that if I do get run down I can depend on Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to make me strong and well."

"My husband was troubled with dizziness and nervous headache, and was cured by the Nerve Food. He would not be without it in the home."

CROSSFIELD, ALTA., JULY 23, 1914.

Bottrel Picnic.

On Friday last, July 17th, in lovely weather this annual popular event took place. There was a good crowd, in fact, the number was larger than ever before. People from all the surrounding district being present: Cochrane, Crossfield and Airdrie being represented.

Horse racing and racing of different kinds, both for men, women and children, along with other athletic sports helped to amuse the victors.

In several of the horse races as many as 35 horses started. The refreshment booth run by the committee did a great business, so great was the demand for the various edibles, etc., that there was a shortage. The profits will be held over towards next year's picnic.

Everybody present had a good time.

"Old Smokey" Prominent on Edmonton Exhibition Hanger.

Spectacular Features Arranged for Coming Fair.

Tales of "Old Smokey's" jumping performance at the Edmonton Spring Horse Show of 1914, will be handed down through the years to come. Old Smokey who accomplished some of the most remarkable feats ever witnessed in the show ring, occupies the place of honor on the hanger for the Edmonton Exhibition, August 10th to 15th.

When Smokey surpassed even the most sanguine expectations of the assembled eyes of Alberta, the Exhibition Association felt that his performance was most typical of what was in store for visitors to the coming exhibition, and his photo taken while being ridden over the hurdles at the Exhibition of 1912, by Miss Helen McDonald, was chosen accordingly. In every line of exhibit, in every class of amusement and entertainment, the association is preparing to surpass the expectations of everyone attending the Fair.

The list of attractions which has been suggested from Chicago to play before the grandstand every afternoon and evening, contains special features which are equally amusing and entertaining and will while away the time between the races. The races promise to be more keenly contested than ever were races on the Edmonton track.

As in the past, the Military Tattoo will be a fitting conclusion to the splendid program arranged for each evening. This will be conducted by Mr. Ross of Toronto and will include regiments from the armies of England, France, Canada, Germany and the United States. A detachment of the Alberta Dragoons will engage in the Tattoo this year, and the spectacular effect will be greatly enhanced thereby. They will also put on a Musical Ride both afternoon and evening every day of the exhibition.

The Parker Shows will occupy the Midway, and need no description.

Excursion Rates have been arranged on all railways running into Edmonton. Price Lists may be obtained on application to W. J. Black, Manager, Edmonton. Entries close July 25th.

Insurance.

Hail! Hail!!

No doubt every Farmer is anxious to know a strong Company in which to insure his Crop. Here it is.

I represent the Winipeg First Underwriters Agency of the Home Insurance Co. The "Home" is the strongest company in the field to-day. They insure a very fair rate and pay losses immediately in cash.

For full particulars and a square deal Phone 2015 or see Rabst. M. McCool Phone 2095.

Farmers -- Insure

YOUR CROP AGAINST LOSS BY HAIL in a company with assets of $6,500,000 and a record for prompt settlement.

A Company that will refund your premium on every acre destroyed by any cause other than hail.

Will accept negotiable paper from those who believe that "Cash on hand" is a "lost art." No interest.

Office at residence.

P. I. McANALLY,

Commissioner for taking Affidavits, Local Agent.
